Nebraska Does Have a Seat Belt Law for Children

It has been brought to the attention of the Weoma Club News that Nebraska does not have a mandatory seat belt law for drivers as printed in the August 21 issue.

According to Nebraska Law 39-6103.01:

1) All children from age 4 or from a weight of 40 pounds, whichever comes first, are required to ride correctly secured in a federally-approved child passenger restraint system—an infant, convertible, toddler or booster safety seat.

2) All children from age 4 or from a weight of 40 pounds to age 5 are required to ride secured in a safety belt (or safety seat).

3) The law is a primary enforcement law. Drivers can be stopped and ticketed if child passengers are unrestrained.

4) The law applies to all seating positions in the vehicle.

5) The law applies to all Nebraska resident drivers.

6) The law applies to all vehicles except taxicabs, mopeds, motorcycles, public passenger and commercial buses, authorized emergency vehicles and pre-1963 vehicles not equipped with safety belts.

7) The law carries a $25 fine, which is waived if the driver produces proof of purchase or one-year rental of a safety seat.

8) Medical exemption: A Nebraska physician can exempt a child from the law for any medical reason. A driver must carry the physician's statement in the vehicle. Failure to produce the statement carries a $10 fine.
